

Implemented in 1997, the Breaking Barriers Program is an effort to reduce recidivism. The video based training series is designed to challenge men and women in correctional settings, or those transitioning back into the community, to recognize that they can control how they think and the decisions that they make. Since 1997, 704 offenders have graduated from the Breaking Barriers Program.